Statement from Scott Driscoll, Member for Redcliffe

Member for Redcliffe Scott Driscoll has rejected claims made in media reports today as completely baseless.

"I left my position as the honorary/voluntary president of the Queensland Retail Traders and Shopkeepers Association in September last year, and ceased having an operational role immediately after the March 2012 election," he said.

"Funds spent by the QRTSA on trading hours matters were spent entirely appropriately, and any claims about governance or reporting issues are completely false.

"In addition, my membership of the United Retail Federation is clearly disclosed in the Queensland Parliament Register of Members' Interests exactly as required.

"My focus is 100% on serving the people of Redcliffe as their local MP, and I will not be commenting further on the baseless claims of disgruntled individuals."

Ministers,

We have a number of ministers doing media events today.

You are likely to be asked about Scott Driscoll, and the impact of the reports about him on the government.

I'd suggest you say you have no comment on those matters.

On whether Mr Driscoll should have been preselected as a candidate: that is a matter for the party.

KD

I have spoken to Glenys about this issue and advised that emails being received because people are signing the petition should be set aside, however no response will be provided as there are no contact details included in the emails.

Any emails/letters received on this issue, but not as part of the change.org petition are a different story.

ECU would like to know if we want to prepare a standard response for those that include their contact information?

Can I get your thoughts on this one please?

Kind regards

Hi Bec

The reports for this week are attached. The amount of incoming correspondence has increased markedly this week with 3087 this week against 755 last week. This is largely due to two new campaigns that started up this week.

The flood mail issues report is attached to the general mail issues report at the back.

There were two new mail issues and these are:

- negative views regarding Scott Driscoll MP, Member for Redcliffe
- protesting reductions in Queensland's Workers' compensation coverage

The number of overdue has decreased this week from last week. Economic Policy has the most with 43 and many are waiting on advice from Transport and Main Roads which has not been forthcoming. The rest are negligible.

The report on overdue for referrals to departments is attached.

The standards/campaigns report is also attached.

Below is the report on the status of ministerial liaison letters, the ones we refer to departments to prepare the response. The numbers of items referred for a ministerial liaison response are as follows:

Queensland Liberal National Party MP for Redcliffe Scott Driscoll link to fund scandal and claims of secret control of taxpayer-funded community association

- by: Mark Solomons, Kelmeny Fraser
- From: The Courier-Mail
- March 18, 2013 10:24AM

WATER Minister Mark McArdle has called for Redcliffe MP Scott Driscoll to clear the air as allegations of misconduct continue to dog the first-time MP.

"I think Mr Driscoll has to clear the air very quickly and if there's evidence of misconduct, put it to the CMC and have it investigated properly," Mr McArdle said.

"We are now in a position where to let it go on is not in the interests of anybody.

"If there is evidence existing, put it to the CMC.

"This can't go on. It must be clarified. It must be cleared up one way or the other."

Several Cabinet Ministers, however, refused to say if Mr Driscoll had their support this morning, saying it was a matter for the Redcliffe MP.

Housing Minister Tim Mander said he was sure the claims would be investigated.

"If they are substantiated, the party will look into it," he said.

Education Minister John-Paul Langbroek said he also believed Mr Driscoll should clear the air.

"The most important thing is that he answer to the people of Redcliffe and the people of Queensland.

"Mr Driscoll needs to answer these (allegations) and I'm sure he will."

Natural Resources and Mines Minister Andrew Cripps also called on anyone who believed they had evidence of misconduct on the part of Mr Driscoll to report it to authorities.

"If the Labor Party or anyone else have got anything that they want to put to the CMC, or anyone else who wants to investigate it, I think its important they do so," he said.

Earlier, Opposition leader Anastacia Palaszczuk called for an investigation to be launched, further encouraging Premier Campbell Newman to refer the allegations to the Crime and Misconduct Commission.

"I am very disturbed by the allegations that have been raised today in The Courier-Mail. This is now a scandal engulfing the Premier," Ms Palaszczuk said.

"There have been countless allegations about this member. At first there was just one or two but they are just compounding."

Ms Palaszczuk called for Premier Campbell Newman to state whether or not he fully supported Mr Driscoll following the allegations.

Mr Newman has repeatedly said he supported Mr Driscoll despite allegations of misconduct and impropriety.

But Ms Palaszczuk said it was important for the Redcliffe state member to openly speak in parliament and answer questions.

"He has not made a matter of privilege, he has not explained himself," she said.

"This member for parliament, Mr Driscoll, needs a full explanation about mates being appointed to the board, about public money going to his wife, how his wife came to be employed in the organisation when apparently she had, and I quote, nil qualifications. There are so many questions here that need to be answered."

Mr Driscoll has not responded to the media's attempts to contact him.

Earlier, The Courier-Mail established that Redcliffe MP Scott Driscoll has been directing the operations of the Regional Community Association of Moreton Bay, a provider of frontline social services to his electorate, from behind the scenes since becoming an MP.

Mr Driscoll cemented control - with the help of friendly RCAMB members - installing political mates on the board in 2012, getting his wife a job on the payroll and having dissenting staff removed and forcing a troublesome board member to resign.

Former RCAMB staffers have told The Courier-Mail that money was so tight last year they could not access funds to buy food for homeless clients of the RCAMB, which received about $1.6 million in public funding and donations in 2012.

It has been established that Mr Driscoll has had secret day-to-day control of the management of the RCAMB for at least the past 12 months, while Norsefire, a company owned by his wife Emma and where he was sole director until she took over on February 25, received almost $120,000 for consultancy work, only some of which was actually performed.

Emails, invoices and other documents show Norsefire charged $1000 a week until the middle of last year for "media communications strategy and management" and subsequently $2600 a week for "secretariat management fees".

From August 2012 there is no evidence of Norsefire having any employees to conduct any work on behalf of RCAMB.

Even prior to this, RCAMB staff say there was little evidence of any benefit from the "press liaison" work they understood Norsefire had been contracted to do.

Mrs Driscoll, a florist, was from late last year on the payroll as "HR admin officer".

Mr Driscoll wrote her job description, which includes "formal qualification requirement: nil".

On February 28, a day after the Department of Communities asked RCAMB, formerly known as the RCA, for information about payments to consulting companies, Emma Driscoll sent an email to a colleague at the association asking for help to "delete what is in the drop box that was on my laptop which I have of course left at RCA".

"Is there a way we/you can do a complete sweep of that computer both files/trash/word docs etc ... so there is nothing left on there?" she asks.

All the members of the RCAMB board during 2012 except one worked on Mr Driscoll's election campaign, including his campaign director Ben Scott, his campaign treasurer Geoff Jamieson and former local Federal LNP chairman Brian Roselt. Its president until last month was Bruce Mills, another supporter.

The Courier-Mail understands Mr Mills held about half of the votes of the RCAMB's 20 members as proxies, which with the votes of Mr Jamieson, Mr Scott and Mr Roselt gave Mr Driscoll's political mates control of the board.

The other member of the board is understood to be a "client" of the RCAMB's mental health program.

When former RCAMB Treasurer Terry Rogers, himself a former state MP, questioned Norsefire's involvement in the association in March 2012, Mr Driscoll wrote to Mr Mills and Mr Scott saying: "The buck stops with an elected MP or Minister to make any required disclosures not Terry Rogers ...

"I personally suggest it's time his position on this board was considered for him and action taken pretty quickly right now".

Mr Rogers was forced to resign from the board shortly afterwards.

Mr Driscoll has disclosed his directorship of Norsefire but has publicly distanced himself, saying it is "100 per cent owned by my wife".

He has only ever described himself as "patron" of the RCAMB.

But emails show he micromanaged the body, giving instructions on everything from financial audits and how to respond to demands for information from bureaucrats to which airconditioning company should be used.

In January he even banned staff from participating in free health checks provided by Medicare Local.

"The fact paid RCA staff at large are being encouraged or allowed to avail themselves of funded services while the staff are meant to be working in essentially a government funded role could understandably create a catastrophic PR disaster," Mr Driscoll wrote to services manager Tracey Slater on January 17.

Emails also show Mr Driscoll presented Norsefire invoices to RCAMB and chased up payments.

Driscoll must 'clear the air': Minister

Date

March 18, 2013 - 11:00AM

A senior Queensland minister says a government MP who is facing claims of impropriety must explain himself.

The opposition has gone to police and the auditor-general with serious concerns about the conduct of Liberal National Party MP Scott Driscoll.

Opposition leader Anastacia Palaszczuk says Mr Driscoll has embroiled Campbell Newman in a new scandal, and the Premier should refer his MP to the corruption watchdog.

Energy Minister Mark McArdle has told reporters it's time for Mr Driscoll to make a public statement.

"I think Mr Driscoll has to clear the air very quickly," he said on Monday.

"If there's evidence here of any misconduct, put it to the CMC (Crime and Misconduct Commission) and have it investigated properly.

"I think we're now in a position where to let it go on is not in the interest of anybody."

According to report in The Courier-Mail, Mr Driscoll has been secretly controlling a taxpayer-funded community association that helps the homeless and others in need.

It alleges he's been funnelling tens of thousands of dollars in consultancy fees to his wife's company.

The Courier-Mail claims Mr Driscoll has had "secret day-to-day operations" of the Regional Community Association of Moreton Bay, which received about $1.6 million in public funding and donations in 2012.

The newspaper says it has seen emails, invoices and other documents that Nosefire, a company owned by Mr Driscoll's wife Emma, received almost $120,000 for consultancy work related to "media communications strategy and management" and "secretariat management fees".

A published email also shows Mrs Driscoll asked the association to wipe a computer after the Department of Communities sought information about payments to consulting companies.

All members of the association's board, except one, worked on Mr Driscoll's election campaign, the report claims.

Mr Driscoll has not responded to AAP's requests for comment.

Comment has also been sought from the Premier.

REDCLIFFE MP Scott Driscoll has referred himself to the Queensland Integrity Commissioner David Solomon.

A written statement from this MP this morning said: "Mr Scott Driscoll MP, Member for Redcliffe, has today sought a meeting with the Queensland Integrity Commissioner to allow the Commissioner to make an independent assessment of allegations made via certain media outlets within a co-ordinated campaign against the MP and his family."

"Mr Driscoll said he looks forward to letting the independent Integrity Commissioner make an unbiased assessment of all associated matters and has expressed his complete faith that absolutely no wrongdoing whatsoever will be found to have occurred. "

Earlier, LNP minister Mark McArdle called on Mr Driscoll to "answer to the people of Queensland" as allegations of misconduct dog the first-time MP.

"I think Mr Driscoll has to clear the air very quickly and if there's evidence of misconduct, put it to the CMC and have it investigated properly," Mr McArdle said.

Hi Kristian

The reports for this week are attached. The amount of incoming correspondence has increased this week with 1583 against 1530 last week.

As you know, we have still been doing a daily flood mail issues report and we have aggregated the week's items and these are attached to the general mail issues report at the back.

There were four new mail issues this week and these are:

- changes to the bus services
- de-amalgamation of shires/councils
- opposing the proposed privatisation of the Sunshine Coast Public Hospitals
- support for reinstating funding to the Tenancy Advice and Advocacy Service Queensland

The number of overdues has decreased this week from last week. Economic Policy has the most with 45 and many are waiting on advice from Transport and Main Roads which has not been forthcoming. The rest are negligible.

Report on overdues for departments is attached.

The standards/campaigns report is also attached.

Below is the report on the status of ministerial liaison letters, the ones we refer to departments to prepare the response. The numbers of items referred for a ministerial liaison response are have increased steeply, so much so, that we are struggling to keep up:

But the CMC said that that investigation was in 2011 and they did not have the information then that they have now so that is not correct.

"They were investigated and the CMC found no official misconduct," the Premier said.

The original CMC complaint, however, refers to payments paid to Norsefire in 2011 - before Mr Driscoll was elected to parliament.

A spokeswoman for the Crime and Misconduct Commission has clarified that the complaint was assessed, but was separate to an investigation.

She said the CMC concluded that based on available information the November complaint did not involve official misconduct and was outside its jurisdiction.

But the spokeswoman confirmed it was assessing all new relevant information as to whether it required further action by the CMC.

Hi guys

Kate Davies has returned two of the Scott Driscoll letters with a request that they be updated in light of the Premier's statement in Parliament this week – eg was referred to the CMC last year and CMC assessed and did not investigate.

We could get further info from Hansard.

Will send these back down - please do not progress any of the previous standard.

I have seen the media articles upon which you have commented. I have discussed these matters with Mr Driscoll, and he has publicly addressed them in responses to the media.

Further, the government has ensured that any suggestions or complaints or allegations were properly investigated. Some investigations have concluded, and some continue. However, I note that no evidence has been forthcoming to support the allegations against the Member for Redcliffe.

Again, thank you for sharing your views with me.

Yours sincerely
